Over forty years ago, immigrant farm workers in California, treated as invisible and second-class, began a struggle for equal treatment. César Chávez's legacy has come to represent the historic striving of Latina/o people for fairness and dignity.

In spring 2006, America had an awakening. Millions of immigrants, their daughters and sons, led the way giving new life to the historic fight to tear down the shroud of invisibility that veils their lives. They made their struggle for dignity the defining political issue of our nation today. The struggle for the rights of Latina/o and immigrant communities will continue to determine the future of opportunity for all Americans.

We must honor our holiday so we can send a message. Latina/o and immigrant communities are equal and will be treated that way. March in Oakland this César Chávez Holiday!
